First Aid

The video opens with a physician talking to reception staff. It shows a staff member returning back to work after an injury.

[Narration]

Every community physician clinic in B.C. is unique.

The size and location of your clinic, along with risks that are specific to your work, determine the first aid resources you will need.

First aid planning and tracking helps protect physicians and staff when injuries or medical emergencies happen in the workplace.

While community physician clinics are considered by WorkSafeBC low-risk environments, it's important to be prepared.

To build and maintain your program use the:

- First Aid Assessment form.
- First Aid Checklist.
- First Aid Procedures poster.
- First Aid Record.
- Drill Evaluation form.
- and Notice to Workers poster.